THE HELP THAT IRELAND

We have long been told that Ireland needs and must have deliverance from her oppressors. Enough money has been sent from America to aid political agitation to buy an amount of territory in the United States equal to the area of Ireland over and over again. It is observable, however, that these contributions do not bring deliverance to the people or make them more prosperous and contented. All the effect that can be discovered is that the agitators are able to roll in wealth, have apparently contributions are large, and generally manage to have easy and luxurious

Once more the cry comes that the people of Ireland are starving. If the agitators were real friends of the people they would not allow this, for the able, if they had been carefully saved that a few dollars more from each will make the Evergreen Isle a free Republic, have no money to spare for food. Ireland must be free though all of her people starve.

But America will not be unmindful of the needs of the sufferers. The causes of the famine have not been within the control of the industrious population. There has been a very serious failure of crops, and to this must be added the of their speed, so we were not much hindranes to production arising from the adjustment of new conditions be- ten minutes I was chilled through, and tween landlord and tenant, the impoverishment of the soil, and the long list of wrongs incident to misgovernment. Quite an excitement prevails at Sierra City, California, says the Truckee Republican, the Boston managers of the Marguerite mine having reduced wages, The formation reached in Belle Isle is and, it is said, having asserted that of a very encouraging nature, and the they could "get men, you know, from Bawston, you know, that would be doosed glad to work the mine for ninety cents a day."

A Western Blizzard

The word "blizzard" is an ominous one, but the thing is worse than the word. We here give the experience of a farmer at Hancock, Minn., written to the Detroit Free Press:

We were still two miles from home when suddenly the sun was obscured, and the air grew cold and chill in a moment. A darkness as of smoke swept over everything. Then I remembered why we were going home, and I gave the horses the whip in earnest, lashing them into a run. Away off to the west there appeared to be a leaden wall sweeping toward us. There was a hum in the air. A light breeze sprang very little trouble on their minds when up, grew stronger, and in one minute contributions are large, and generally became a gale. The wall came down with railroad speed, the roar of its approach every instant growing louder. From the top of a roll in the prairie we could see our house, and it came pretty near being our last glimpse of it.

The atmosphere appeared to be all snow, and every flake of it was in a hurry to get somewhere before the rest should get there. * * I could feel a motion to the sleigh, so that I knew the horses were still moving. The cold was intense. I tried to ask my wife if she was suffering, but I could not bear my own words.

The horses were still moving, and although I could not see them. I lashed them with the whip. It seemed hours since the storm had shut us in, and I was fast becoming convinced that the horses had got out of see objects about me, and it didn't take long for me to ascertain that we were in the barn and were safe. get lost in these storms? To be caught out on the prairie by a blizzard means death, and nothing can avert it. After a settler has been here one Winter, it's a sly old blizzard that catches him. Not so the newcomers. They cannot imagine that there is danger at all times. Three people were lost that day in this vicinity, one of them a woman who had been over across the prairie about a mile to see a sick neighbor. When she saw that a storm was imminent she started for home on foot. She never got half way there. "When was her body found?"

Pastoral Instructions of Archbishop Alemany.

2. The precept of fasting implies also that of abstinence from the use of flesh Below zero now every morning. Too meat. But, by dispensation, the use of flesh meat is allowed in this diocece during Lent, except on the following days, to-wit: The Wednesdays and Fridays, the ember days, the Thursday and Saturday of Holy Week, and the eve of the feast of St. Joseph, on which day there is no leave to use flesh meat, except by dispensation from the respective pastors, which they are hereby authorized to grant in cases of necessity. All Saturdays are also days of abstinence, but of obligation. The Holy nence, but of obligation. The Holy See restricts the use of flesh ment to one meal on the day in which abstinence is dispensed, except for those employed in heavy labor.

3. The promiscuous use of fish and flesh meat at the meal is forbidden in Lent, even on Sundays.

4. It should be carefully observed that, according to an answer of the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office to the Bishops of England in 1860, and to the Bishops of Ireland in 1877, the Holy See has never consented to have introduced the use of milk, butter and still less of cheese at the evening collation on fast days. #### The Consangulaity Puzzle.

Steve Popovich, of the Wine House, explains the Egyption relationship puzzle as follows: After the gold fever WASHINGTON'S Archbishop Alemany, of the Catholic broke out in California two young Egyptians embarked thither from their native land to seek their fortune, and, luck favoring them, in a few years they returned to Egypt, where they both got married. But, having once tasted good fortune, they could not rest easy, and soon re-embarked for California, where they died shortly afterwards. Meanwhile their youthful spouses bore them each a son. Years elapsed, and the boys grew to the age of manhood, which in Egypt is quite early, while the two mothers (married at about oleven or twelve years of age) were handsome, buxom matrons. One day one of them proposed to the other that they enter the matrimonial slip-noose once more, remarking at the same time that, as their respective former mates had been such intimate friends, it would cement both the friendship and relationship were each to take the other's son for a husband. This was agreed to and done; and one of the ladies having a boy, it er to her husband," as can be readiy

Railroad Enterprise.

The passenger department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has issued a handsome little book, of over one hundred pages, entitled the "Political Revolution," which contains the official returns of all the State elections for 1882, the names of members of the 47th and 48th Congresses, beside much other interesting political information, which makes the book a valuable one for reference. Care was also taken in inserting here and there through the book favorable notices of the B. & O. R. R. so that two objects are accomplished by this publication, viz: furnishing a book that will be preserved and attracting public attention to the railroad as an important line of travel. The "Red Book," as it is called, is circulated gratuitously.
